- There was a power seen in the New Testament Christian and Church not seen today. When the Church gathered supernatural power was evidenced (e.g. Acts 2).
- In Acts 2 the powerful coming of the Holy Spirit upon Christians came only after many days of prayer and waiting.
- When people in Jerusalem saw the display of power in other languages, miracles and unity they were attracted to Christianity.
- Is everything supposed to be predictable? Why are so many today so weak and defeated? We can even anticipate in some church services where we will see a reaction from the people.

- You don't make the Spirit work, you simply go with it, like a surfer goes with a wave.
- The Holy Spirit wants to lead us into something deeper, but do we believe it is even possible? Do we believe the Spirit will work in us in such a way that is simply powerful and astonishing? If we really want this then we need to really believe it and pray like we believe it.
- What would the Church look like if we simply stopped taking control of it and let the Spirit lead?
